

Designing Learning Experiences for the English Classroom (E-04)

Learn how to design effective and authentic activities and plans for the English language classroom!

About the Course

This practice based and online course focuses on designing classroom activities, lesson plans and lesson assessment activities for an English language classroom. Through a series of authentic examples and case studies from the English language classrooms, the course equips you with strategies and concepts necessary for creating and executing effective English language lessons.

Course Objectives

- Design activities and lesson plans for English language classroom.
- Design lesson assessment activities in alignment with the planned objective and teaching-learning activity.
- Critically reflect upon lesson plan implementation and understand its further implications on planning

Who can do this course?

Teachers and educators teaching English to middle and secondary level students and having access to at least 5-10 students can undertake this course. This course will help you design interesting learning experiences for your students.

Course Outline

Unit 1

The first unit explains Task-Based Language Teaching and is concerned with creating tasks for an integrated language skill classroom. The unit, however, has seven sessions focusing individually on the four language skills, vocabulary and grammar for close attention to each aspect.

Unit 2

In the second unit participants will explore the idea of 'backward design' where they will learn to plan for their classroom by focusing on the desired results first and then thinking about the methods and activities. They will create and analyse language lesson plans in this unit. This unit will also enable teachers to plan for a mixed ability language classroom and critically reflect upon lesson plan implementation.

Unit 3

In the third unit participants will engage in designing lesson assessment tasks to evaluate student-learning at the end of the lesson. They will also design rubric for assessing students' performance on the lesson assessment activity/task.
