TISS

The Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS) was established in 1936 as the Sir Dorabji Tata Graduate School of Social Work. In 1944 it was renamed as the Tata Institute of Social Sciences. In 1964 it was declared Deemed to be a University. The Institute also has three MHRD/UGC approved off-Campuses at Tuljapur, Hyderabad and Guwahati. At present, the Institute offers graduate, post-graduate, M.Phil., and Doctoral programs from these Campuses. Since its inception, the Vision of TISS has been to be an institution of excellence in higher education, committed to respond to the changing social realities through the development and application of knowledge, towards creating a people-centered, ecologically sustainable and just society that believes in equality and social justice and protects and promotes the human rights and dignity of all. The Institute has been consistently ranked very high by the National Assessment and Accreditation Council (NAAC) and its present score is 3.89 out of 4.00, which is the highest among the currently accredited universities in the Country.

Centre for Study of Social Exclusion and Inclusive Policy (CSSEIP):

The CSSEIP was established at TISS, Mumbai in March 2007 as one of the X Plan schemes of the University Grants Commission (UGC). The mandate of the Centre is to understand through research how certain castes and communities such as the Scheduled Castes (SCs), Scheduled Tribes (STs) and Religious Minorities continue to face social exclusion, discrimination and violence. The Centre is also to understand the impact of various protective and development policies and measures that the State has introduced in addressing such issues. In 2014, the Centre introduced an integrated M.Phil-Ph.D. programme in Inclusive Development and Social Justice. The primary objective of the programme is to build research capabilities of students interested in understanding the structures and process of social exclusion and the impact of state's inclusive policies in addressing those issues. Another major academic activity of the Centre is its annual seminar. The purpose of this initiative is to bring together research scholars and academics to debate on issues and challenges of those castes and communities facing exclusions of one kind or the other and the outcomes of various inclusive policies introduced and implemented for the purpose by the State. It is also to understand the ways forward through debate and discussion. The Centre's M.Phil/Ph.D. scholars play a major role in hosting this event.

The Seminar Context:

India is a nation of diverse nationalities. Since independence, India with its cherished ideals of liberty, equality and fraternity enshrined in the Constitution has been trying to become one nation with its socio-cultural diversities intact. Recognizing the caution given by the Chairman of the drafting committee of the Indian Constitution Dr. B. R. Ambedkar that fraternity or oneness among citizens can not become a reality, unless the citizens are able to experience first liberty and equality. The desire to infuse a sense of oneness among all citizens was paramount at the time of framing the Constitution as the incidents of indignities, violence and hatred particularly between castes and between religions was not only widespread but also more frequent. Even today a vast majority of the Scheduled Castes (SCs), particularly in rural areas, experience caste based indignities, discrimination and violence and prevented from experiencing liberty and equality because of the non-SCs' desperation to hold on to their superior position in the caste hierarchy.

The Scheduled Tribes (STs) also experience violence and economic marginalization due to their unique socio-cultural traditions and way of life and extreme level of illiteracy and ignorance prevailing among them. Lack of legal protection against the entry of outsiders into their locations and the number of state sponsored development projects which often displace them in large scale from their natural habitation and means of sustenance are also responsible for their plight.

It is due to such intimidating social conditions of these castes and communities that necessitated special Constitutional provisions for their protection and development. The major policies introduced by the government to realize the spirit behind the special Constitutional provisions provided for the SCs and STs include: (a) Protective laws such as the Protection of Civil Rights Act 1955 (PCR Act) and the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act 1989 (POA Act); (b) Reservation Policy. While the protective laws are meant to protect these communities from all forms of injustice and exploitation, the Reservation policy is to ensure representation of the SCs and STs not only in august decision making bodies such as Parliament and State Legislature, and now in local bodies as well, but also in bureaucracy and in all government funded institutions and Public Sector Units (PSUs). Under this policy the SCs and STs are entitled in proportion to their population admission in educational institutions, including Universities and colleges funded by the government. This policy has been in practice from 1950 onwards.

In 1992, this policy of reservation was extended, as per the recommendation of the Mandal Commission, also to those Socially and Educationally Backward Classes whom the Constitution recognized as the Other Backward Classes (OBCs). Although the OBCs accounted for over 52 percent of the total Indian population (as per 1931 Census), only 27 percent reservation was permitted in view of the Constitutional condition that the overall percentage of reservation should not exceed 50%. Initially this 27% reservation was applicable only for jobs in government departments and institutions. This job reservation for the OBCs was protested through violent means and also through self-emulation. The protest was largely by the people belonging to non-SCs/STs and OBCs. But the government went ahead and implemented it. Later on, this reservation for the OBCs was extended also for admission in government funded/aided educational institutions and universities, including IITs. This came into effect from the academic year 2008-09. This decision was also revolted against, although unsuccessfully. One of the main arguments advanced against reservation for the OBC was that the OBCs who primarily constituted of the so called Shudra or Backward or intermediary castes, did not suffer the kind and extent of indignities, violence and poverty which the SCs and STs did. Then, why should the OBCs also be given reservation. But reservation for the OBCs both for jobs and education is a reality today in most of the academic institutions, although the extent of its implementation is very poor, far from the desired level.

Despite repeated GOs from the UGC and the Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment that funding would be stopped to those educational institutions and universities that fail to fill up the reservation quota in admission and recruitment, many of the academic institutions have not filled the reservation quota, and the reason usually given is that “suitable candidates are not available”.

Amidst such prolonged resistance to implementing the existing reservation policy in its true spirit, the present government has introduced 10% reservation for “Economically Weaker Sections” (EWS) for admission in Central educational institutions (103rd Amendment of Constitution of India), and this Order was implemented from the academic session 2019-2020. The people falling within the EWS category include those other than the SCs, STs and the OBCs.

With the inclusion of EWS also as beneficiaries of reservation, it is not inappropriate to conclude that there is hardly any caste or community today in India that is not covered under reservation policy. In other words, now every caste and community is a potential beneficiary of reservation policy. This new development in the history of reservation has generated number of legal, social and political questions among academics, political leaders and social activists.

Seminar Theme:
In the above context, the Centre for Study of Social Exclusion and Inclusive Policy, TISS, Mumbai proposes to organize a two-day national seminar on “Revisiting Reservation Policy in India: The Changing Basis and Perspectives”. The proposed seminar has the following objectives:

Seminar objectives:

- To understand the current debates on reservation and its impact on various castes, tribes and religious minorities.
- To comprehend the context of shifting the basis of reservation from social and educational backwardness to economic backwardness, and its possible impact on the social justice commitment of the Constitution.
- To understand the justifications advanced by various castes and communities demanding to be included and excluded from the list of SCs, STs and OBCs.

Specific Sub-themes:

1. Building fraternity (a feeling of oneness) among all Indians and the relevance of representation through reservation.
2. Politics of reservation.
3. Reservation or affirmative action policy in countries outside India.
4. Implementation of reservation policy provided for the SCs and STs.
5. Reservation policy for the Socially and Educationally Backward Classes i.e., the Other Backward Classes (OBCs) and its implementation.

6. Education and employment opportunities for the SCs and STs through reservation policy: Achievements and Challenges.

7. Political reservation as a means to represent the issues of the SCs and STs in Parliament, State Legislature and local bodies such as Panchayat.

8. Efficacy of exclusive protective laws such as the PCR Act and the SCs and STs (Prevention of Atrocities) Act 1989 in protecting the SCs and STs from all forms of injustices and exploitation.

9. Women among the reserved categories as beneficiaries of reservation.

10. Alleviating poverty among the Economically Weaker Sections (EWS) through reservation policy.

11. Implementing reservation for the EWS and the legal, social, economic and political issues and challenges ahead.

12. The issue of sub-caste reservation or quota within quota.

14. Claims of certain castes and communities to be included in or excluded from the list of SC or ST list: Social and legal issues and challenges.

15. Religious Minorities as beneficiaries among the OBC category.

These are merely the broad sub-themes of the seminar. The participants of the seminar are free to decide their own title of the paper, but to see that the chosen title is directly related to any one or more of these sub-themes.

Instructions for submissions:

- Submissions on the above themes are expected from those engaged in teaching, research including M.Phil and PhD scholars, and advocacy.
- The abstract should be concise and within 500 words. It should have at least a working title, what it tries to attempt (objectives), and a brief outline of methodology used in the proposed paper.
- The completed papers should be within 3000 to 3500 words.
- All submissions must entail the full name of the participant, his/her educational qualification and contact details, including Cell No. and email id.
• All abstracts and completed papers must be sent to email: <csseip.seminar2019@gmail.com>

Important dates:
• Announcement of Seminar – 25th September 2019
• Last date for abstract submission – 15th October 2019
• Notification of selection of abstracts – 20th October 2019
• Last date of registration and fee payment: 31st October 2019
• Submission of full paper – 15th November 2019
• Seminar dates – 29th and 30th November 2019
