

Advanced Centre for Women's Studies

School of Development Studies, TISS Mumbai invite you to a talk on

Gender and water policy

by

Dr. Sonali Baliram Wakharde

Assistant Professor,
Department of Sociology, University of Mumbai

This talk is an attempt to give an assessment of the national water policies in India from a gender perspective. The speaker begins with the discussion on the connection between women and water, and then goes on to describe how gender responses are required for policy analysis. Women have the potential to take the responsibility of water management at local level. Women's participation in water activities not only addresses the issue of access to water but also highlights the issues related to water control, water pricing, water rights and politics of water use. The speaker explores how gender can influence the policy implementation through an analysis of women's participation in water management at local level.

13th October, 5 pm

Register in advance for this talk please Click